The Center for Neighborhood Enterprise (CNE) empowers neighborhood leaders to promote solutions that reduce crime and violence, restore families, revitalize low-income communities, and create economic enterprise.

CNE expert staff, lead by Robert Woodson Sr., has provided training and technical assistance to a broad range of more than 2,600 leaders of grassroots organizations in 39 states.

CNE is headquartered in Washington, D.C. It partners with the U.S. Department of Justice to implement Violence Free Zones which have reduced violence among youth in six cities across the nation. CNE has provided its financial literacy program to more than 26,000 adults nationally. It assembled task forces of the most effective grassroots leaders across the country to advise Congress, laying the groundwork for welfare reform and the Charitable Choice legislation that facilitates partnerships between government and faith-based organizations.

Are you feeling overwhelmed by the problems plaguing your community? Do you ask yourself “is there a better way for me to help?”

A

The Kansas Department for Children and Families (DCF) is partnering with the Center for Neighborhood Enterprise (CNE) to provide an opportunity for grassroots leaders to learn, share and grow together as part of the Kansas Community Leadership Enterprise (KCLE).

D

KCLE is designed to come alongside Kansas communities, in collaboration with leaders and community members, to discuss area needs and develop community-driven solutions. Join up to 240 leaders who will have the opportunity to participate in six KCLE summits across the state.

Why should I attend?

1. Feel inspired by the gifted speaker Robert Woodson, Sr., as he shares his vision and examples of neighborhood transformation and empowerment.
2. Experience two days of interactive leadership enhancement training on assessment, development and collaboration.
3. Access the latest Kansas research on child and family well-being.
4. Build capacity for serving families and improve results through community mobilization.
5. Develop a breakthrough plan of community-driven solutions.
6. Receive ongoing technical assistance.
7. Learn about DCF’s efforts to build strong Kansas families and inform DCF staff how they can help reduce barriers for families.

About the Summit

There will be up to 40 leaders at each of the six summits, representing health, education, faith, family, welfare, business and foundations. Our goal is to bring together key leaders within the community to identify common problems and a plan to carry out workable solutions. The interactive, intense training covers the State of the Family research for Kansas, community assessments, networking and leadership development.
